Glass Museums in the United States

A selective list, arranged by state, and compiled in 2008-2010 from sources noted below. Information as to hours, the collections, and email contacts, should be verified by contacting the individual museums. Addresses, phone numbers and website contact information have been taken from the website of each museum. This list includes some museums whose collections are the production of just one company. Each museum will have on display a representative selection of the glass collection, and usually not its entire collection is on display.

In 2008, the following websites had information on glass museums:
www.cutglass.org (American Cut Glass Association’s website) (American & Canadian) www.glassonline.com (brief list of international museums) www.eapgs.org (Early American Pattern Glass Society; primarily pattern/pressed) www.justoldglass.org www.contempglass.org/links/linkdirs.html (Art Alliance for Contemporary Glass)
www.fairy-lamp.com/Fairylamp/GlassCollections_FLC.htm

http://www.selman.com/museums.html Listing of museums with paperweights, including relatively small collections not included below

Sometimes, a museum or collection appears on one of the above websites, but if the information could not be easily verified, that is so noted. Many of the statistics concerning the size of the glass collection were obtained from the Fairy Lamp website, and may not be up-to-date.

The museums were not contacted for information; all information below is from printed and online sources.

In 1982, The Corning Museum of Glass published Glass Collections in Museums in the United States and Canada. An update to this guide has not been published, but the 1982 guide will provide background information on many of the museums.

The compiler of this bibliography (as noted on the last page) would appreciate additions and corrections.
